ABD EL KRIM OPENS FIRE ON SPANIARDS; NEGOTIATIONS FAIL

Madrid Refuses Moor's Demand for Position of High Authority and Financial Inducements

By Special Cable MADRID, July 19-News coming from Melilla, via Malaga, states definitely that the negotiations between the representatives of Abd el Krim, the rebel Moor leader, and the Spanish Government have broken down and the Moors have been firing on the Isle-of Alhucemas, which is held by the Spaniards. A military truce for one month had been arranged between the two sides, which was eventually extended for 10 days longer. The negotiations were conducted, to begin with, on a small boat belonging to a Spanish cruiser off the Riffian coast, but later by dispatches carried from the small Spanish island of Albucemas to the ceast.

And all Keim demanded a position of the coast. Abd el Krim demanded a position of high authority with large financial inducements, but the Spanish delegates could not agree to these demands.

MADRID, July 5 (Special Correspondence)—The situation as between Abd el Krim, leader of the rebels, and Spain has undergone some serious unexpected variations lately There has been the usual Spanish talk about Abd el Krim being at the end of his tether, and of his followers ing most anxious to stop all show of fighting and to make peace with Spain, while the civil high commis-sioner, Señor Silvela, says that he will not listen to any propositions from which has jurisdiction over the affairs the rebels that would not assist to- of the Philippines. Moor's Terms High There may be negotiations of a kind from time to time, but it is apparent that Abd el Krim is maintaining stiffly his high terms and that he has no disposition or tendency whatsoever toward capitulation and humble surrender. He places conditions contin-ually that Spain feels it cannot consider. One of his last, according to veracious reports, is that he demanded the expulsion from the Spanish zone of Abd el Malek, who has been friendly

Recently a more than usually serious attempt was made to bring the two sides to something like real conference, and, as the result of overtures made by Spain, Abd el Krim seni along some envoys to negotiate the preliminaries upon which a conference might be opened. These discusns lasted two days and resulted in failure, for the preliminaries could not be agreed upon. The Spanish idea was that Abd el Krim should make submission to the Maghzen, or Sultanic Government, according to the new formula of the protectorate.

Spain's Conditions Rejected

The envoys declined absolutely to allow the Maghzen to enter into the question, intimating that they would treat with Spain only and without the intervention, though only nominal, of any other element. Also they would And el Krim being recognized as a Sultan and the rebel country, mainly that of the Beni Urriaguel tribe, being eckoned as a protectorate with Spain as the protector. The National Merchant Marine Association, of which Joseph E. Ransdell (D.). Senator from Louisiana, is president, has come out strongly in opposi-tion to direct Government operation. This organization was the largest and most influential group that worked with the Shipping Board in its contest for a ship subsidy in Congress to help American companies to compete with foreigners. A questionnaire sent to the association's membership showed unified opposition to direct Government operation, with the view that the board should make some arrangement with private interests for carrying on the task of keeping the American flag on the high seas.

This is in compliance with an order issued by Hugh M. Alcorn, state's attorney, who is conducting a campaign against all the saloons in Hartford County.

Mr. Alcorn, starting his campaign in Hartford, brought injunction proceedings against three saloons, and before the cases came to trial the proprietors voluntarily dismantled their places and converted them into bona-fide businesses. Since then the proprietors of all the other saloons except three, not wishing to run the risk of having their places closed for a year through an injunction order began to dismantle their bars, and a survey made by a representative of seek some arrangement, whereby private companies will operate the lines terday revealed that within a few days on a commission or charter basis, with every vestige of a bar will disappear prospect of purchasing the lines from the saloons. As for the three on when the financial burden of saloons that have not begun to carry out Mr. Alcorn's order to dismantle their bars, the state's attorney plans to bring injunction proceedings against them designed to close the places for

Mr. Alcorn is naturally pleased with the results his campaign against the saloons is producing, but he has made it plain that he will not relax his efforts until Hartford County becomes a saloonless county. He believes he is well within his authority in ordering the dismantling of the bars, believing that the removal of these appurtenances will serve to remove temptations to the proprietors of the saloons to violate the prohibition

It is highly probable that the other state's attorney's in the other counties will follow the example of Mr. Alcorn and launch similar campaigns against the saloons in their respective jurisdictions. They have been following Mr. Alcorn's campaign with much interest, as have the police officials of many of the cities that have serious prohibition enforcement problems. The campaign has also been widely commented upon in the press.

CONFISCATORY SUITS

FILED ON SHIP LIQUOR WASHINGTON, July 19 (AP)-Department of Justice officials said today that libel suits would be filed TEACHER PRAISES soon in the New York federal courts to confiscate the liquors seized recently from foreign liners.

If future violations of the Supreme Court liquor ruling occur, the Government is said to be prepared to pursue a more vigorous policy.

It is said to be the intention to of the new Government ship liquor policy. For this reason the confisca-tion suit probably will be brought under the tariff act, or possibly under one of the old revenue statutes providing for Government confiscation of contraband imports.

Similar results are seen everywhere where we can get fair and accurate information. In some of our large cities in the east and in certain sections of the country, the anti-prohibition forces, heavily financed by the interests, are using every endeavor to break down the law for the enforcement of the provisions of the Constitution. It is a struggle of monied interests, of agelong custom and of habit and appetite against the well-being of the Commonagainst the well-being of the Common-wealth. It is to be expected that in some of these centers there will be temporary defeats, but the number of setbacks is surprisingly small. In the face of the most terrific propaganda I have ever known, it seems to me that the sober sense of the people is exert-ing itself in the most uncommon way.

President's Dry Stand In the states of Ohio and of Cali-fornia, where significant contests were held at the last election, the prohibition had extraordinary indorsement and reassurance.

The President of the United States has spoken in no uncertain tones, and is standing by the law, and is using the power of his office for the indorse-ment thereof in a noble way.

Recently we made an investigation in Chicago, the second largest city in our Carefully, for four months the whole case was studied by compe-tent investigators. The published re-ports, the facts and conclusions of which have not been disputed, show the overwhelming benefits of prohibition, notwithstanding the extraordinary ef-forts of the wets to defeat the purposes of the law.

Recently I held one of our great conferences in Bridgeport, Conn. Connecti cut was one of the two states which did not ratify the Eighteenth Amendment, and yet while I was there the president of the Bar Association devoted his annual address to the subject of prohibi-

As published it occupied an entire page in the daily paper. It spoke by the records and the evidence it gave of decreased crime, of better order, of ishing demands for charity, of better housing, better home life, as a result of prohibition, was simply overwhelming. One of the best known judges of our ourts in Chicago has recently investiated the results of prohibition in 49 lities. His findings and conclusions are to be published within the next month. I have had the opportunity of learning in advance of his work and it will be one of the most outstanding testimonies to the actual success of this movement which has yet been published.

Let no one be deceived, the struggle is on. It is flerce, it is a real battle, but temperance and prohibition have won a signal victory. There is no human probability of any retreat, and in my judgment prohibition has been adopted in the United States as a permanent part of the Constitution and the law will continue to be as well enforced as any law on the statute books. Generally speaking, it is now probably outside of a few large cities, better enforced than most of the laws of our land. Let no one be deceived, the struggle accountant and experienced in teachan additional teacher by Mrs. Anna K. Clark to instruct veteran vocational trainees in the Clark School of Business Administration, testified this morning in the continued hearing of the charges made by Mrs. Clark agaist the Boston district board of vocational rehabilitation that the Clark School had done good work for the veterans while the witness was in touch with the institution.

Mrs. Clark has testified that she had engaged Mr. Giblin because of his experience when she was told by officials of the Boston veterans' board that while there was no demand for "pre-commercial" training such as the school had originally contracted to do in 1919, there was a demand for courses in accounting.

Mrs. Clark charges the local board with willful violation of contract and unjust discrimination against the Clark School. She testified on Monday that after she had engaged teachers in bookkeeping, she was told by the Boston board that the demand for instruction in bookkeeping had fallen off, but that accounting was wanted. Giblin was engaged, but pupils for accounting were sent to the school, Mrs.

Mr. Giblin said today that the school was doing valuable work and that men were taken with meager training and turned out qualified.

PHYSICIANS IN OPEN REVOLT AGAINST A. M. A. MANAGEMENT

Chapter of Forthcoming Book by Asa Matthieu Shows That Organized Medicine Is Facing Critical Times

of a series by Asa Matthieu, being a chapter of a forthcoming book on "Medical Politics," which uncovers the situation, as it exists in the United States, regarding propaganda and legislative bills to promote state medicine and similar autocratic measures. The articles are not intended as an attack on the character of the members of the medical profession, but are simply designed to expose the aggressive nature of medico-political activities.

XII

Evidence multiplies that these are critical times for organized medicine, and that practically the whole profession, as represented by the rank and file of serious physicians, is in open revolt against the present management and control of the American Medical Association by groups and cliques.

A report of the legislative committee of the Medical Society of the State of New York, published in the June (1921) issue of the New York State Journal of Medicine, is illuminative. lating to the practice of medicine, introduced in the New York Legislature, the provisions of which were apparently agreeable to physicians long identified with medical politics and the management of the American Medical Association, the committee report

Crushing a Revolt

In complaining of the apathy of members, the report advises: Unless a greater interest is taken y every individual member, and esby every individual member, and especially by the officers whom the members elect, in these matters which so directly interest and affect them, they will very shortly be overtaken by a calamity not apparently undeserved.

In January, 1922, a medical advisory committee, with headquarters in Ohio, and composed of the rank and file of members of the American Medical Association in various parts of the country, sent to the secretaries of county medical societies in a number of states a circular letter in which it was stated that "The public and the profession are being sold out."

The resolution was pass lowing an address by Miss Charl O. Williams, field secretary of the National Education Association, in which she alluded to the education bill before Congress.

Statesmen who come back to "little ray homes in the west" find that too prolonged absenteeism is bad politics. The folk in the constituencies resent it. They feel that the glamour of affairs at Washington too easily blinds the average Senator or Representative who once was content with the minor diversions and less distinguished soclety of Main-Street.

Owing to war work in Congress, hundreds of members of both houses this summer are making their first protracted visits to local regions since 1917. International Fellowship

Indorsement was given by the convention to the plan for international fellowships worked out by the interwomen. Similar indorsement was given in London recently by the council of the international federation. The plan as it stands provides for the raising of $1,000,000 in all countries to be used as an endowment fund, the

WHEAT HARVEST MAY "SAVE FRENCH FRANC"

By Special Cable PARIS. July 19-Good reports re specting the French harvest are coming in and the effect upon the French franc may be considerable. The Algerian crops have more than doubled compared with last year. In south France and in the center of the country wheat is being cut and a week nence it is expected that harvesting will begin. In the northern parts of France the recent heat wave greatly improved the prospects. Calculations, which are being made, indicate that between 75,000,000 and 80,000,090 quintals of wheat is being gathered. This will be sufficient, or almost sufficient, for the needs of France. There will be little need to import wheat from abroad. This is bound to make a considerable difference in the just ending over 13,000,000 quintals

AMERICAN RUBBER EXPERT CHEERFUL OVER THE FUTURE

In London Address Says Larger Use of Rubber Means Shortage in Few Years

LONDON, July 6 (Special Correspondance)—Dr. W. C. Geer, vice-president of the B. F. Goodrich Company of America, recently spoke at the Institution of Rubber Industry on the state of that industry. .
Dr. Geer said he did not believe that 94 per cent of the world did not want motor cars. Yet America had 10,794,-000 of the 14,507,000 cars in the world. She had 6 per cent of the world's population, and 84 per cent of its cars.

Allowing three tires per year per car, a year's requirements meant 52,500,000 tires, for which 300,000 tons of rubber were necessary.

In Five Years a Shortage

He estimated that in three years from now this amount would probably have risen to about 500,000 tons, and the problem then would be, not "How are we going to get rid of surplus stock," but "Are we going to get all we want?" In coming to this conclusion he had ignored all possible new uses for rubber.

Dr. Geer advocated co-operation between England and America, manufac-turers and producers, on things of common interest. America's consum tion of raw rubber was about 70 per cent of the world's output of £300, 000,000, and this consumption was mainly in motor tires. In 1913 a moforist was glad to get 3500 miles from a tire. Now he wanted 10,000 and often got half as much again. Tires are cheaper now than in 1913, so if the torist is getting three times the mileage he ought not to complain if he producer asked for a little more than he had been getting lately.

Increasing Use of Rubber Recalling the first rubber shoes that came over to America from Great Britain, Dr. Geer said that industry had grown till there was hardly a person who did not use rubber in his or her footwear in some form.
P. J. Burgess, chairman of the Rubber Growers Association, said that the restricted output had been a necessity from the British producers' point of view, but he looked forward to unrestricted output, and he agreed with Dr. Geer that there was more likely to be a shortage than a glut five years

He looked forward to latex or crude rubber being used in every home and to its being used as frequently as the glue pot is today. He confessed to having sealed up a hole in his golf stocking with a patch of latex. What the result would be in the laundry he did not know.

FRIENDS CONTINUE TO HELP RUSSIA

Aim of Committee Is to Aid Peasants to Help Themselves

MOSCOW, June 26 (Special Correspondence)—"The American and Brit-ish Friends will continue their relief work in Russia. After the coming harvest our feeding program will be largely dropped and we will turn our energies to reconstruction work, designed to help the people in the famine-stricken area get on their feet again." This statement was made re-cently by Dr. Wilbur K. Thomas, ex-ecutive secretary of the American Friends' Service Committee. He con-tinued:

Reconstruction Work

Dr. Thomas declared that the present condition of the region which he visited represented a great advance over last year. He said:

There is still acute suffering, and many deaths from starvation are reported from regions where we were not able to penetrate with our food. The peasants have also sustained considerable loss as a result of recent heavy floods, which washed out a number of farms and destroyed a large amount of property. But, on the whole, the prospects are brighter, and a more hopeful spirit is evident.

Our wish in this work is to give a concrete example of international good will. We are not concerned with the religion or the politics of these suffering peasants in the Volga Valley. To us they are simply fellow beings in need. There is still acute suffering, and any deaths from starvation are re-

To the Public

The New England Telephone and Telegraph Company has stated its determination to carry out the promise which it has made to its new operators that they shall have permanent positions if they make good and desire to remain with the Company; and that in consequence it cannot take back into its employ all of the striking operators.

Nevertheless, in its statement of July I the Company recognized a responsibility to "those young women who, misguided but otherwise well-intentioned, deserted their post of duty by reason of bad advice; and who did not realize the serious nature of their act as employees enlisted in the public service."

Inquiries are being made as to the attitude of the Company in the matter of re-employment of such of these girls as we have places for.

The following conditions are being carried out in the case of girls who are daily being taken back into the service:

Wages

This matter does not involve a relationship between employees. The Company is making no attempt to adjust wages on the basis of new employment. On the contrary, a striking operator who may be taken back into the service will receive the wages to which her full length of service entitles her and will progress in the wage scale as her total service with the Company would normally entitle her to do.

Seniority Practices

These practices constitute not only a relationship between the Company and its operators but a relationship between different operators in the matter of choice of tricks to be worked, time when vacations shall be taken, and similar matters. Here the position of the Company is primarily governed by its obligations to its loyal operators who have continued to give service to the public.

a. As between operators who remained at work, including such operators as returned to the switchboards on or before July 2, 1923, and striking operators accepted for re-employment subsequent to July 2, 1923, the privileges of the latter under these practices will be junior.

be Other seniority questions will be worked out from time to time as the needs of the service in the several offices affected by the strike may seem to require, and in accordance with the general policies outlined by the Company in its statement of July 1, 1923.

Benefit Plan .

The Benefit Plan, maintained by the Company without cost to its employees, provides that the rights of the latter thereunder shall depend upon continuous service, and consequently striking operators have lost all rights thereunder, but the Company has decided to liberalize this situation in the following manner:

Striking employees who returned to work on or before July 2, 1923, will retain all rights under the plan except for the brief period during which they were absent from the service.

A right to benefits accruing to employees in case of accident will be restored to all striking employees who may be accepted for re-employment subsequent to July 2, 1923, immediately upon their re-employment.

In the case of striking operators who may be accepted for re-employment subsequent to July 2, 1923, all other rights under the plan will be restored after a probationary period of one year to the full extent that the total length of service of such operator with the Company would entitle her.

The Situation

The Company desires to carry out any obligations which it may have to the young women mentioned above, but the needs of a public service do not permit us to idly await the return of our striking operators. Daily we are adding permanent employees, and daily the number of places that can be made available for operators now on strike grows smaller,

Some Big Gains Made

A new group of stocks stood out as market leaders during the forenoon session, a broad demand prevailing for the merchandise issues and other shares which do not usually govern the course of prices.

Accumulation of selected stocks was on a large scale, notably Foundation Company, which advanced 3¼ to 77½, a record price. Other large gains included Associated Dry Goods, 4 points, National Lead 3, Hartman Corporation 25%, and American Car, May Department Stores, Sears Roebuck, Kelsey Wheel, Air Reduction, and Brooklyn Rapid Transit second Brown Shoe... 35 buck, Kelsey Wheel, Air Reduction, and Brooklyn Rapid Transit second since under the receivership, have the revenues been sufficient to meet ope-rating expenses or interest. Interest payments were made with borrowed money, derived from capital

SPECULATION IN THE HIDE MARKET

Significance of Latest Sales Largely Lost in Apparent Buying Merely for Turn

Although sales might indicate considerable activity in the packer hide done by hide dealers with the hope of turning them quickly at a profit;

thus the significance is lessened.

The sale of hides, mostly of light weight, as far back as January, including spring take-offs of no better quality, gives to values obtained no marked stability, especially because the packers got fractional advances and were willing to book further sales at the same figures.

Regular tanners will not admit, therefore, that prices are entitled to be called established rates, and that judgment, based as it is upon a pro-tracted term of slack leather buying, amounts to much. The chief concern of all prominent anners is the short stock of summer natives, particularly heavy native Furthermore, the packers exfor manufacturing the flax straw into pect a land. for manufacturing the flax straw into pect a land. fiber, upward of 100,000 persons would ing July. However, there are yet find employment in producing the flax crop, Mr. Denhaene said. altead, therefore, with a dull demand for finished leather, it appears illoging the flax anticipate against a presumpcows. tive shortage and thereby lend strength to the situation.

Although it is obvious that hide and leather conditions are more or less mixed just now, a buyer's offer, not in line with absolute necessity, is doing just that much to sustain, if not boost, quotations.

The South American (Frigorifico) hide market is fairly active. Prices are steady at 14½ and 14½ c. and f., New York, for steers. The country hide market is out of line with general conditions. Prices are high, compared with packers.

Chicago city calfskins are selling moderately at 16 cents. Twenty-five thousand St. Louis and St. Paul June take-offs sold at 17½ cents; July eastern skins sold at 15 to 16 cents.

The whole situation depends upon a marked improvement in the sell feet.

NO INDICATIONS OF PUBLIC BUYING IN WHEAT MARKET

CHICAGO, July 19-Wheat showed a downward slant in price today during the early dealings. Enlarged receipts together with a poor response in Liverpool to yesterday's price upturns on this side of the Atlantic had a bearish effect. There were no indications of general public buying. The opening, which ranged from 1/4 to % cent lower, with September 97% to 98 cents and December $1.00% to $1.01, was followed by a slight furthe setback.

Corn and oats were easier with wheat. After opening unchanged to 14 cent lower, September 75% @76c, the corn market continued to sag. Oats started at 404c decline to %c advance, September 34%@35c. Later, the market held to the initial Provisions were weak.

Snodgrass and Rice Face Each Other in Another Feature Singles Match at Longwood

CHESTNUT HILL, Mass., July 19 (Special)—Today's feature singles matches in the tournament for the historic Longwood Bowl singles championship on the Longwood Cricket Club courts brings together R. N. Williams 2d and W. J. Bates and Harvey Snodgrass and L. B. Rice. Both matches are scheduled for the grand-stand courts. Williams should win his match although he may find Bates' match, although he may find Bates' change of pace disconcerting. bably be hard pressed to defeat Snodgrass, who hails from the Pacific coast. The westerner is already credited with a victory over W. M. Johnston, but is not experienced on Through misfortune of the draw Snodgrass has yet to play against a man with the speed and placement of Rice. What he will be able to do will depend on how soon he solves the return of the fast-skidding ball.

Other singles matches will be be-ween N. W. Niles and Seiichiro pect, and C. H. Fisher and A. W. Jones. The latter match should be well be a second latter match should be interesting, as both are hard hitters, although Fischer, the intercollegiate champion, has a slight advantage over the Yale

The most attractive match of the day, however, is expected to be in the doubles competition between Niles and Williams against Zenzo Shimizu and Masanosuka Fukuda of Japan, Japan, as usual, owing to the uncertain volleying of its representatives, is again having difficulty picking a doubles team. Shimizu, the man with the smiles, captain of the team, will find this match a good test.

The hard-hitting Leland Stanford Junior University team of P. F. Neer and J. M. Davies will oppose Clyde Curley and C. K. Shaw of Providence, Other matches will be between Bates and Snodgrass and the Fischer brothers and Johnson and Gardner against Rice and Kashio.

Canadian Davis Cup Tennis Team Chosen

Forento, Ont., July 19 (Special)
HE Canadian team, which will meet Japan in the first round of the Davis Cup competition on the courts of Mount Royal Club in Montreal on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week, will be composed of W. L. Rennie of Toronto, W. F. Crocker and Jack Wright of Montreal, and A. S. Milne of Van-couver. Rennie, the Canadian singies champion, was selected last week as a result of his showing in the recent Canadian championships, while the other three were chosen last night by the Canadian Davis Cup Committee, after a series of elimination matches Tuesday and yesterday. These three players, with E. H. Laframboise of Montreal, each played four matches, one with each of the other candidates, and the one, while Richards won one and lost three and Laframboise lost four. Milne is the only one of the quartet with previous Davis Cup experience, having been a member of the 1921 team that was defeated by the Australians. Laframbolse was also a member of that team.

WEST POINT CADETS STAND HIGH IN TESTS

WASHINGTON, July 19-With about 100 men out of the total of 1200 enrolled in the United States Military Academy callet corps competing, a grand average of 81.7 per cent for all four events in the standardized ath-letic rating under the new National Amateur Athletic Federation standards was established, it was shown in statistics made public yesterday at the War Department. The rating qualifies the cadets for the "college standard excellent" designation.

"The grand average for the entire student body for the four events was 326, or seven points higher than the grand average of the fourth class, said a statement accompanying the statistics. "The cadets from Idaho all achieved the standard under the tests of the 'varsity athlete,' and with a percentage of over 90 stand at the head of all the states. Connecticut percentage of 70 is at the other end of the line.

Power-Boat Races Over Today -Sail Boat Contests Tomorrow

PUT-IN BAY, O., July 19 (Special) The third and last heat of the power-boat races in the Interlake regatta being held here this week was gatta being held here this week was scheduled for this morning, and the boats to receive trophies as class champions will be designated before noon. The final heat for sail boats will be held tomorrow morning.

A feature of the afternoon will be squadron sail and novelty races, in which a large number of boats will participate. Among the novelty races are ladies' power and cat-boat races, in which the winners will be presented with trophy cups. Swimming contests will be held shortly after determine the interlake championships. The day will be closed with a yachtsmen's ball, one of the brilliant social events of the regatta.

Better time as a whole was registered in the races yesterday than was made in the initial heats the previous day. The lake was smooth and a freshening breeze provided ideal conditions for the annual classic. Winners yesterday in the sail-boat events were practically all duplicates of the day before. Power-boat winners in the first events fell far behind in the second contest.

Much interest is centered in the class R, sloop, sail-boat events, in which the Mebleh, of the Put-In-Bay Yacht Club has won in both races. The winner of this class will represent the south shore of western Lake Erie in the annual Great Lake Inter-Association race for the Richardson cup, at Toronto in September.

The star-boat event came in for the honors yesterday, as far as chief in-terest was concerned. Little Dipper, Tuesday's winner was disqualified, while Twinkle, of the Cleveland Club crossed the line first. The five other boats in the contest finished so close that determination of their places was a difficult matter. class will represent this section in the United States star-boat races, which will be held this fall. The Grand Mardi Gras, on which boatsmen have been looking with anticipation, took place last night. It came up to the expectation of the most ardent boating followers, and hundreds enjoyed the event. Distribution of and the regatta will close with a cruise 633 Saturday.

And the best part of it all was, he was given a free rein at Washington. The school was then in its early stages and its athletes in the crudest of form, and Conibear, despite criticisms that came in to him from all sides, was in working out his theories.

The stroke, which now bears his name and which has been changed little since he maugurated it at Washington, works in almost opposite manner from the English stroke. The old stroke called for a long lay-back and a long sweeping slide action. The Conibear stroke calls for a long reach for the catch, with most of the power of the carch, with most of the power of the oar being applied between the slide space from the catch until the oar is at right angles with the boat. The rest of the slide action from the time the oar is at right angles with the boat is merely used as "follow super-men could use it.

But Leader's work at Yale has upset all such notions as this to the thinking sport fan. In one year he completely overturned the previous rowing system for Old Eli and produced a brand new winning eight. So it is evident from this that it is the stroke and not the type of men that stroke and not the type of men that makes crews.

Another fact contributes to this theory. The Washington crew, under the disadvantage of traveling across the continent and rowing in a new climate, and under different rowing the continent and rowing in a new climate, and under different rowing conditions, was not the heaviest crew on the Hudson this year. The Columbia eight outwelghed Washing ton, as did several of the other crews, so it finally comes back to the origso it finally comes back to the original premise: It is the stroke and system that makes the crew and not the men who make up the shell.

There are those who seem to feel that it is a mark of weakness to notice the suffering of an animal, also many people think it beneath the dignity of religion to call attention to the lower animals while there are people in need, but there are so many ways to help people and so few to help dumb animals that cannot speak for themselves.

It seems to me one's heart should be large enough for all, and the reflex influence of humane education that teaches justice and kindness to animals is worth while.

kindly treated.

Humane education should be taught in every school in every state in the Union, not only for kindness and justice but for economy as well.

I read in your paper Governor Baxter's letter to Governor McRae about the humane law and how it is enforced in the State of Maine. How fine it would be if Arkansas would enact the same sort of laws and send humane officers into the oil fields to stop the cruelty and appeal to the conscience and pride of the drivers. Some may say this would be useless but every human being can be touched by kindness if approached in the right way, and if each would practice justice and mercy to all lower creatures in our everyday life what an example it would be to the thoughtless.

I for one will continue to do what is possible in a small way and am most happy to see a great newspaper speak in behalf of God's creation that cannot speak for itself.

But Christopher was made Assistant Surveyor-General of the King's Works, big enough for college. pher was not at all disturbed, for he knew he was doing something more than just playing with the wooden pieces. And his parents were wise enough to understand and let him alone; for, although they had set their hearts on his being a mathematician alone; for, although they had set their hearts on his being a mathematician, they feasoned that, if experimenting with blocks gave him so much pleasure, there must be some good purpose in it. So the boy built undisturbed.

ure, there must be some good purpose in it. So the boy built undisturbed.

Christopher's Years at School

Happily the years passed until he was 14. Then, having finished grammar school, he went to Wadham College, Oxford. There Christopher continued his mathematical studies and began the natural sciences, chemistry, physics and astronomy. He was so busy lost and astronomy. He was so busy lost and astronomy. He was so busy now that there was no time for building, and he had no blocks with which to experiment, had there been time; for, in the room where he lived, half a dozen other boys lived too, and to litter up the place with pieces of wood would not have been permitted. No one called him Carpenter Christopher flow. He was just Christopher Wren, and seemed no different from any of the other boys, except that he was amazingly clever at mathematics, in astronomy making the highest marks of anybody in the class. He loved the study of the stars and determined that when he finished college he would become an astronomer.

He did that very thing. He was so intensely interested in the book of the heavens, and put so much thought and labor into studying it, that he soon became one of the most distinguished astronomers in Europe; and, because he loved his work, he was satisfied and happy. But deep within his actil to love he labor to the labor with the churches, and of these he built and structure, with St. Paul's, which and, because he loved his work, he was satisfied and happy. But deep within him was still the love of building, of seeing churches and halls rise where vacant spaces had been, and very often, as he passed some paises or cathedral, he would stand for a long time studying transept, arch and nave, or beautifully constructed gateway, and did much joy in the observation.

Der the shaded street of the protty English town, and John did they make it so or so."

VER and over the seng sounded along the shaded street of the pricity English town, and John Nutter, the boy who sang it, was not foolish, as one might think from the meaningtess words. He was just trying to tease his cousin, Christopher Wren, into playing at rolling hödpis with him, and he believed, if he kept at thong enough, he would succeed. But Christopher did not hear him. He was building a tower out of blocks which he carpenter had left from making his grandmother's summer house, and was so busy setting the pieces in place and shaping them with his knife, when they refused to fit, that he had no thought of anything less.

The boys of East Knoyle, the quiet town in the English southland where Christopher was born, were like boys in every other pairt of the world. They liked to make things to use in their games, or just for the sake of having them, tops, wagons, bird cages, animal crates and various other articles; and Christopher, because he liked sports as much as anybody, had as many toys to his credit as any lad in town. But, above everything else, he delighted in making houses with blocks, not just copying those he saw along the street or that some other or his fancy castles, churches, and stately halls, like those in which statesmen gather to make a nation's laws.

Always and always structures were forming in his thought, rising with lace-like spires or lifting stately domes skyward; and it was such a joy to him to put them into form for others to see that this occupation gave

Suppose he walked right up along the beam! What would it feel like to be at close quarters with a star? Peter shut his eyes tight, as tight as they would go, and turned his face towards the wall. He wouldn't look any more at the stars, nor at the moonbeam.

Just at that moment something made aim open his eyes and right before him on the wall a dozen shadows were dancing and twisting, hither and thither, into all sorts of weird shapes. Peter did not know exactly what they were, but it was fun trying to make out what they were endeavoring to do.

seeds, flowers, and such like specifiers from the vegetable kingdom.

Bit perhaps what is most important of all is that your museum must be started in such a way that it can "grow" larger with your cellection of specimens. It is not at all a good plan to start straight away with a large box of cabinet; far better to begin quite simply, just having two or three small boxes, quitil you have sliough material for larger ones.

For your collection will never be complete. Even the largest and best equipped museum in the world is only really half made, and a large stant of men are constantly chagaged in adding new things and in rearranging the old. That will be one of the great joys of this little museum which you care to sitend to it.

Making the Cabinets

The simplest and tiniest of all museums can be started with nothing more than an empty match-box! Into this, perhaps, you will put one particularly interesting little shell which way have found on the base. Then ularly interesting little shell which you have found on the beach. Then, as soon as you find another that is worth keeping, put that into a second match-box, and so on with a third and a fourth.

The next step will be to turn your separate match-boxes into a little cabi-net of drawers, and you can do this duite easily by gluing one above another as you add each extra one to your collection. There is, of course, no limit to the number of match-boxes which you can glue together in this way; and, if you ask your friends to save you all their empty boxes, it need not be long before you have several handy little cabinets with a dozen or so drawers in each.

Thus you could have one little cabinet for the mineral kingdom, one for net for the mineral kingdom, one for the animal kingdom, and one for the vegetable kingdom; and, if you would like to disguise the fact that your cabinets are made of nothing better than match-boxes, you can give a piece of green cloth or leatherette over them, and fix tiny brass handles (which you can buy at the hardware thep) to the front of each drawer. The great value of little cabinets of this kind is that you can always en-large them by adding extra boxes as you need them, and, though they may not be large enough to hold all the things you wish to save, there are hundreds of most interesting things which you can put into them. Collecting Things on Holiday

But, to a certain few, the piece will always be an exquisite delight; for this pastoral that, following the lead of Tasso's "Aminta," and Guarini's "Il Pastor Fido," John Fletcher wrote when still young, and that John Mil-ton, in his "Comus," was to imitate, is by far the best thing of its kind in our language, remaining now, as then—despite an occasional lapse into ugliness—a lyrical poem of extraor-dinary sweetness, delicacy, and charm. Debt to Shakespeare

I say "when still young"; for though were able, at the same time—thanks cilia Society, of Boston and of the Fletcher was born in 1579, and "The to Fletcher's cunning in character Symphony Hall "Pop" concerts, and Faithful Shepherdess" was not published, it seems, before the winter of 1609-10, the writing bears, surely, the very imprint of youth-its ingenuous-Especially excellent was Miss Jeans, who, excepting perhaps Miss Athene ness, the freshness and spontaneity of its lyrical impulse, and its flattery, by imitation, of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," all pointtunity, were hardly so successful as the women; but I liked the modest ing to that conclusion.

Fletcher's debt, in this piece, to the author of the "Dream" is as consid-shepherd, "Daphnis," of Mr. Basil erable as it is interesting. The amo-Howes, and the freshness, mental and rous couples of the one play, with their metamorphoses, cross-purposes, misunderstandings, and reconcilations, are the counterpart of those of the scious of lacking. This undoubtedly enriched his musical vocabulary, but other. Amoret's tearful complaint he never forgot that he was speaking

CZECH PROGRESS IS SCRUTINIZED

Financial Safety of Country Said to Depend on Maintenance of Favorable Trade Balance

By MARJORIE SHULER PRAGUE, June 28 (Staff Correspondence)—Is the Czechoslovakian prosperity more than skin-deep? Can the present relatively high position of the crown be maintained? Is there real security for Czechoslovakia while her neighbors, Germany, Austria and Hungary, are at low economic levels? These are the questions which the world would put today to the new little republic, the republic which is carrying on an experiment in democracy which has met with the interest and admiration of thousands of persons.

Principal Exports

.Dr. Kuchera declared that sugar, wood, coal, glass, textiles and some machinery, mainly agricultural machinery, constitute the larger part of the Czechoslovakian exports, those ex ports which must be kept up to a higher figure than the imports if the trade balance is to remain in favor of the country.

The official government figures show an export of raw logs for the first five months of 1922 of 300,000 tons and for the corresponding period of 1923 of 864,000 tons-figures which have led critics to declare that "Germany is devastating the forests of Czechoslovakia." This Dr. Kuchera emphatically denied.

Coal is another heavy item in the exports, especially this year, when the French occupation of the Ruhr has led Germany to buy more outside supplies. Conditions Must Be Changed

Dr. Kuchera declared that the Government has found it impossible to continue a situation which he admitted has existed—that of buying certain products at a fixed price for export at a lower figure than those products were being marketed for at home "Our own economic condition would not permit that to continue," he said, 'although it is true that in the beginning some of our trade was built on that basis." He is very confident that the crown will maintain its present level. He said:

level. He said:

We want to keep it where it is. I am selling crowns, every day in the foreign market because I do not want the crown to rise any higher. Our own scale of wages and prices within the country would be upset if that should happen. But I am also certain that the crown will not fall. We are now selling necessities to our neighbors. Their economic fate and ours are bound together, it is true. When the price of their currency falls it affects our own conditions. But for the present they must buy from us to maintain human existence.

Kansas is one of the few states which still assesses on the pupil or his parent the cost of the textbook. The practice is generally condemned by educators as being unfair to the child and as making the word "public" as applied to schools a misnomer. The whole question of adult education has a far wider prospect than is usually suspected. It will inevitably exercise a marked infiltence upon international relations. Cannot Expand Indefinitely

The point of view of Mr. Dennis Robertson of Trinity College, Cam-bridge, also given in the bulletin, is that Oxford and Cambridge are of limited size and cannot expand indefinitely without losing their peculiar characteristics. Adult students will competing, not only with well-todo boys who, he adds, "are also God's creatures and often sorely in need of education." but with the increasing number of boys of humble origin coming up from the secondary schools with some form or other of state aid. The conditions of bringing in adult students must therefore be carefully thought out. The majority of the students at Cambridge are adolescents the students imported will be adults. This also asks for careful consideration. The writer would like all adult students to pursue an intensive course of study for at least two years. always been a trainer of men in leading positions in the national life, these adult students should be, as far as possible, men who show promise either as leaders in education, indus- systematically according to scholastic try or the various branches of the and other general conditions, it would labor movement. Do Large School Buildings Lessen Scholastic Efficiency?

Chicago, Illinois Special Correspondence ARGE school buildings do not mean a lessening of scholastic efficiency, nor are instructors vitaily affected by overcrowded condi-tions which must result in all large ditions to present structures, and cities where the student populations are constantly shifting. Such is the opinion of Peter A. Mortenson, superintendent of Chicago schools.

"A survey of grade school averages," said Mr. Mortenson, "showed that the attainment in reading and was of a slightly higher percentage of proficiency in the case of schools of over 2000 registration than in those of half that size. This certainly proves that so far as subject matter is concerned, there is no lessening of a student's ability because of crowded conditions.

"There is likewise, so far as can be determined, no appreciable harm accruing to the pupil, as a result of large buildings, long corridors, many steps to climb, and the contact of hundreds of others, all of which have been termed "lock-step" conditions. Of course, there is no method of computing a student's character record, such there is of his scholarship, and there is no doubt but that a betterment in the moral and spiritual side may be effected under less congested

"City schools, however, and particuarly those of large cities, are subject o a fixed amount for expenditures sel aside by tax levy, which they must apportion between upkeep and im-provements, according to rapidly changing conditions. In a city like Chicago, if we arranged every classroom and every school building with just the right number of pupils for each teacher to handle, all arranged system would have to be changed or

There should be no more additions to present buildings as they are already too large for the pupils and instructors. The present system of portable classrooms (there are now 763 of hese) should be discontinued. The two-shift system is wrong and tends to have a bad effect on the child. "We have the same average 10 per cent overload here," said Mr. "that other cities of the country have. We are trying to meet this by continual expansion to the limit of our available finances. We are building no more portables and hope in time to be able to do away with the extended day system. Our high school classrooms now average 31 pupils apiece and we feel it is more important to have them this size with good instructors for each one than to use our fixed amount for expenditures to employ inferior teachers with smaller classes."

Is Thoreau wrong, for once, in a literary judgment, or may it be that we have not fully understood him? What has been given above is really an account of the actual, but is it a true account? Ay, there's the rub! For it is not so easy a thing afternal. poetry have not always agreed with is not so easy a thing, after all, despite this belief. The ages of toil where through these irregular up-and-down fields with their zig-zagging hedgerows have been won from the stubborn and haughty moor, the patient and loving labor which has carved these lanes out of granite, the skill of all the many men who made these sturdy bridges and these little towns of stone in years gone out of memory could any poet neglect their tender and pathetic beauty and still give a true account of them as they actually are? For all these matters of human meaning are not mere items in a coldly totted list. They make the very atmosphere of this place, its essential quality or genius. They are its human aspect, with which the poet is peculiarly concerned. A poet who could give a true account of them would indeed give us a bit of purest poetry.

The corner stone of this structure was Johnson's Cyclopædia, a puzzling word that surely somehow must as it knew the answers to questions as it knew the answers to questions have some connection with the threewheeled vehicle the Boy rode, which nest Elmo Calkins, in The Atlantic he called his velocipede. Johnson was a formula, a rhythmic chant, that went something like this, "A-to-Cam, Camto-Eli, Eli-to-Gon, Gon-to-Lab," and so on, rendered in chorus by the full strength of the company, like "Onery, Twoery, Ickery Ann." The company sat when thus engaged on the lowest step of the stairs which fled steeply up from the sitting-room, leaving one step extending into the room, as if the door had been shut too quickly for it to get out. It just held five assorted

Plutarch's Lives of Illustrious Men suggested pictures, but there were none. Nevertheless the book proved a find, and much of it, especially the short, pithy "laconic" anecdotes of the Lacedæmonians became excellent Lacedæmonians became excellent straw for later advertising bricks.

Farrar's Life of Christ was a most readable book in nice large type, with a raft of interesting footnotes, which described such delectable things as the Greek acrostic whose initials spelled the word "fish," the sacred baggage symbol of the early Christians, which indicated their secret meeting-places.

THE celebration at Seneca Falls, N. Y., of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the holding in that city of the first woman's rights convention in America, brings forcibly to the thought of everyone the progress that has been made in realizing the distinction between feminism, so called, and citizenship. In July, 1848, those courageous women who met in convention for the first time to declare the hope that they and their sisters might some day be emancipated from political bondage were regarded as agitators and, worse still, as unwomanly. Yet one glaces at the reproductions of photographs of Miss Susan B. Anthony and Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton, showing them as they appeared at that time, and fails to see in their gentle and kindly faces anything forbidding. The feminism so much dreaded in those days seems now to have been something which should not have been so greatly feared.

It is encouraging to realize how fully and courageously the women of this generation in the United States have fulfilled the pledge which the early champions of equal suffrage made. There is to be enacted, or presented, at the time of the anniversary convention, a pageant entitled "The Progress of Women." That justice might be done would require more than the presence of decorated floats and files of marching women. No picture, no masque, no pen can depict or describe this progress. Heralding the political emancipation so long promised was that equally progressive advance of women in all the civilized countries of the world in education, in the arts, and in business and industry. What perhaps the pioneer suffragists believed would be the preliminary step in preparation for this material emancipation proved to be the supplementary or crowning action which equipped progressive women to protect and safeguard the rights they had gained by their own imitiative.

And it is important likewise that this somewhat liberal education which American women have gained in industrial and commercial pursuits, as well as in a more profound study of history and the arts, has given them a broader view than they might otherwise have had of their political responsibilities. They have been taught, while considering the cost, in money and industrial waste, of wars carelessly or wantonly waged, that it is reasonably possible to take steps to render future wars unnecessary. They have, in considering the problems of the home as they are related to statecraft, learned that their newly conceded rights include that of co-ordinating all constructive efforts for the advancement of the common good. They have found the problem of the state to be that of the home, and vice versa. The rule of reason is unfailing in its application.

All honor is due the brave women who led, in the United States, the crusade which compelled the enfranchisement of American women. But credit is also due those courageous women of a later but no less progressive day who, while fighting against what sometimes seemed to be overwhelming odds in carrying on the campaign launched by the leaders of the movement whose commendable action the present anniversary marks, thoughtfully fitted themselves for the really greater work before them. Their equipment in the way of education and industrial training arms them, in a time of recognized need, to do their part in the arduous work of the world.

About ten or twelve years ago a project was being seriously discussed in France of flooding a fourth part of the great Sahara Desert. Professor Etchegoyen of Paris was, perhaps, the chief proponent of the plan, and it was urged that all the engineering necessary would be the digging of a canal from the Mediterranean Sea inland, while the results would be far more than commensurate with the efforts expended. These would include, it was claimed, the addition of a great new colony to the possessions of France, in which millions of people could support themselves in comfort, the establishment of a considerable trade between Algeria and France across the Sea of Sahara, a sea which would vary in depth from ten to sixty fathoms, and a change of climate in that section, due to the presence of the water, from equatorial extremes of heat to the pleasing temperature of Natal. The project, however, did not materialize, and with the World War was doubtless forgotten completely.

By Rail Across the Sahara

Now a plan for a railway across the famous desert is being considered and seems likely to come up for practical discussion before the Chamber of Deputies. Not that the project is new, but it has taken on new vigor, as opinion has recently crystallized in favor of a line running from Oran through the middle of the desert to the Niger Bend, that is, approximately due north and south, from a point on the African coast opposite the southwest corner of Spain. Advantages of this course are numerous and include the fact that already the railway track has been laid from Oran to Colomb Bechar, a distance of more than 300 miles, along the coast of Morocco. Thence it would naturally be continued south through Tuarirt, to cross the Niger at Tosaye, which is only about 150 miles east of Timbuktu, and to terminate at Wagadugu, in the midst of the fertile region inclosed within the great Niger Bend.

Following so closely upon the successful motor trips across the desert, this project seems to give positive assurance of a subjugation, in the not distant future, of this region which has for so long resisted man's most strenuous efforts. One unfortunate feature of the proposal, however, is that it is primarily as a war project that it is put forward. Its usefulness for military purposes is emphasized, that is to say, it being argued, for example, as one of the reasons for carrying the railway to Wagadugu, that, in its neighborhood, there is a population of 7,000,000 which would provide abundant man power in time of war. Important, therefore, as are projects making for the development of the waste areas of the world, so long as the main motive in their development is a destructive one, little encouragement should be given them and little real promise of permanent benefits therefrom can be expected.

In a political address, Benito Mussolini, Premier of Italy, announced a few weeks ago the end of Liberalism.

The Split

in the Liberal Parties

This may have been an exaggeration, but in several of the European countries there has been a division in the middle class organizations which before the war controlled the governments. Have these parties lost their vitality, their "raison d'être," or are they only suffering from a temporary confusion? In England the old Liberal Party continues to be divided. It does not appear to know whether the enemy is to the right or the left, or what are its own objectives. Mr. Lloyd George and some of his fellow "National" Liberals hope to become leaders of a new Center or National Party, which will compromise neither with the Tories nor the Socialists. At a recent dinner of the 1920 Club in London, Captain F. E. Guest, formerly Coalition Liberal whip, proposed an early union with the Conservatives, so as to make a solid front against the Labor Party, but Mrs. Coombe Tennant, speaking for Welsh Liberalism, said later that she disagreed with every word he had uttered, and The Manchester Guardian calls Captain Guest "a queer kind of a Liberal," adding that he fails to understand "Liberalism" and that he had better drop the name. The Independent Liberals are standing pat, but are not getting anywhere. It is hard to conceive that they should ever accept certain points in the Labor program.

In France the Lower Middle Class Radical Party, supported chiefly by small landholders, priest ridden and tax beset, lost in 1919 the political power it had enjoyed since the Dreyfus crisis. Its former leader, Joseph Caillaux, is a political exile, and its efforts to formulate a cohesive program for the next elections are painful and slow. Its floor leader in the Chamber, Mayor Herriot of Lyons, is an able man, but he lacks the authority to enforce discipline. At a recent party council in Paris it was voted to withdraw support from the Poincaré Government. The Radical deputies who are ministers were "invited" to resign, which they refused to do. A few weeks before, a Radical Senator, Gustave Rivet, accepted an election to the vice-presidency of the Senate, though his group had nominated another Senator, named Renoult. When called on to explain, M. Rivet said he had been a candidate first and in effect didn't care what the organization thought. More and more the French Radicals are voting with the Socialists, and a coalition with them seems their only chance to regain control of the Government.

In Italy the old-time middle class party leaders have lost their position at the head of affairs. For a moment after the war the power seemed to verge toward the extreme Left, only to return to the extreme Right. Neither Giolitti, Orlando, Salandra, nor Nitti are executives today.

In Sweden the Liberal Party has split this spring on the question of prohibition. But this issue only happened to be the dividing one. The party lacked cohesion and fighting strength. Hjalmar Branting, the Socialist former Premier, explained the division on the ground that the party lacked "a warming ideal" and invited former members who are truly progressive to join the Socialist ranks. The Conservatives also hoped for recruits.

In the United States the Democratic Party was badly defeated after the war, and if it should win in the next elections it will do so less on account of its own strength than because of the division in the Republican Party. That is what happened in 1912.

It seems as though Liberal's the world over, meaning those who represent individualism with a minimum of governmental interference, who truly stand for "neither reaction nor revolution," were able to agree on a negative program only. The fact is that the war, with its consequences of high prices and falling value of money saved up, has left more of a mark on the middle classes than it has on either the manual workers or on the big property owners. It will take a long time for the Liberals to come back.

WHEN a stubborn fact meets a medical theory nowa-

Enforcing the Doctors' Orders

days, the fact has to give way. With laws, made at their behest, behind them, the political doctors yield nothing to truth. For them the ancient adage, "Circumstances alter cases," has no force. No circumstance can contribute to the escape of the luckless one who comes within the scope of what is called "preventive medicine." Two items culled from a single newspaper afford illustration of this.

One of the accounts referred to told of the detention of an American citizen, Charles T. Rowley of San Francisco, and his wife, on an island in New York harbor, because Mr. Rowley, who says he has served in the United States Army, refused to comply with the order of the officers of the ship which brought them from Southampton to New York, that he be vaccinated. Rowley, as his reason for refusing to undergo the operation, declared that as he had been vaccinated sixteen times he should be immune from further experimentation. Reasonably, it might appear, he should be immune from all the maladies against which his self-appointed guardians sought to protect him if, indeed, immunity can be gained by the processes recommended. The ridiculous aspect of the affair vanishes in the matter-of-fact assurance that both Rowley and his wife are to be kept in quarantine, under guard, until he submits to the rule laid down. Evidently his proved immunity, should he be detained long enough to establish that, would have no influence in mitigating the unreasonable order interposed.

The second case mentioned is that of John Early, not unknown to newspaper readers of fifteen or twenty years ago and to medical men then active in enforcing governmental health regulations, so called, as a leper suspect. Early, like Rowley, is a former United States soldier. He saw duty in the Philippines in the early days of the American occupation of the islands; and in 1908 was pronounced a leper. He was quarantined by the health authorities in Washington for more than a year following the making of the medical diagnosis, but was later transferred to a hospital in New York to be put under observation of a specialist, who questioned the verdict rendered by Washington doctors. From then until the present, according to the story, Early has intermittently been free and under confinement. But during all this time, it appears, he has steadfastly refused to verify the theory of the doctors who condemned him to banishment years ago. He unexpectedly put in an appearance in Washington a few days ago and made his presence known to the health officials, who made the somewhat confusing admission that his physical condition was much improved from what it was when they last saw him, several years ago. But Early, like his fellow ex-soldier, is not to be given his freedom. Though he has declined to yield himself to the terrible sentence pronounced against him, and though he has lived among those similarly condemned by the laws of their fellow beings without submitting himself to the mesmerism of that supposed law, he is to be sent back to the little colony which secludes itself from all contact with the world.

IN MAKING the charge that alien influences, not simply un-American, but in many instances anti-American, or Anti-

Un-American

are attempting to establish a condition of nullification of the prohibition law, the Board of Temperance, Prohibition, and Public Morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church places the blame for the anti-prohibition campaign farther afield than is usually regarded as being the case. And yet, why is it necessary to try to specify some individual or individuals as responsible for this apparent activity, which is directing unleashed energies with might and main against this fundamental and righteous reform? In the last analysis, in this as in many another instance, the really blameworthy cause is both un-American and anti-American, if the word American is interpreted in its larger sense of freedom and nobility of ideals. The prohibition reform, that is to say, marking as it does one of the greatest efforts of truly liberated thought to establish legally its beneficence upon the world, has naturally aroused the forces of evil in the battle thereby precipitated. Consequently, the Board of Temperance is completely right when it urges that the Christian people of the United States demand that all political parties shall declare for full enforcement of prohibition and against any weakening of the national prohibition act. The churches of America, it says, expect no party to put forward candidates for President or Vice-President who opposed to the United States Constitution, which they must swear to enforce, or who are politically indebted to corrupt influences or who have encouraged the nullification of American laws.

What does this mean, in essence? Simply that it is being recognized in larger and larger measure that those who are opposed to the prohibition legislation of the United States are, perhaps unwittingly, being made the blind tools of the forces of evil in their efforts to obstruct all moral progress. It is not simply the enforcement of prohibition that is the point at issue. It is the establishment of right in human consciousness. It is not solely the upholding of the technical terms of a much-opposed piece of legislation. It is the declaration of the individual on the side of right and law and order against lawlessness, indifference, and active wrong. As such, there are no two choices in the matter at all. There is really but one side to the question, and that side is obvious to all who choose to face the issue unflinchingly.

Editorial Notes

IT CAN at least be said, regarding the law recently passed by the Italian Parliament in regard to the preservation of wild birds, that a step has been taken in the right direction, although but little more can be said for it because the measure falls far short of what many had anticipated. Complaints have often appeared in the British press about the wholesale destruction of insectivorous song birds on the Italian hills and mountains. In the fall, for instance, an enormous number of birds, mostly chaffinches, redstarts, warblers, and others, are trapped for various purposes. The lawmakers, however, thought it advisable to proceed slowly in the matter, particularly because in some of the northern valleys, where there is a poor population, bird-catching is one of the ways in which the inhabitants make their living. At any rate, this law, even in its present form, is better than no law at all.

+ + + No wonder the United States Post Office Department is constantly sounding warnings to its patrons urging them to direct their mail correctly, for recent information furnished by the department regarding duplication of the names of cities in America gives some idea of the difficulties which arise when letters or parcels are wrongly addressed. For example, there are in the United States no fewer than twenty-five Clevelands, twenty-two Buffalos, fourteen Denvers, etc., and even two Chicagos. There is only one New York, however, and one San Francisco and one New Orleans.

An Outline of Political History

THOSE familiar with a particular happening are the ones who read with greatest interest a current account or description of that event. Spectators who witness a ball game or a race or are present at a mass meeting or flag raising are those who most keenly relish and appreciate a faithful account of those events. So it is that those who quite readily recall the incidents of the political battles waged in the United States since the year 1883 will read with greatest zest the recent book by DeAlva Stanwood Alexander, entitled "Four Famous New Yorkers," published by Henry Holt & Company, New York. The four referred to, of course, the account dealing particularly with partisan politics, are Grover Cleveland, Thomas C. Platt, David Bennett Hill and Theodore Roosevelt. They were, in the period of their concurrent activities, indeed great New Yorkers. Their personal and political influences were farreaching and powerful. In the shaping of state, national and even international policies they at times arbitrarily dominated popular and administrative affairs. By them presidents and senators were made and unmade, often, be it said, without deferring to those from whom must come the delegation of genuine authority.

On the whole the disclosures are disillusioning if one has had a preconceived theory that in all cases those who govern are voluntarily invested by the electors with official power and authority. It is disconcerting and disappointing to be convinced by such a prima facie showing as that made by Mr. Alexander that at some time there did, if indeed there does not still, exist within the dominant political parties in the United States a virtual autocracy-not a benignant domineering force, but a selfish dictatorship whose ambition is not to determine who can best serve, but who can longest maintain its hold upon the machinery of government.

Historically the book is not particularly valuable, chiefly because it deals mainly with personalities. And yet as a chronological record covering the period reviewed it is, to students of politics, interesting and instructive. It supplements three volumes previously published by the same author under the title "The Political History of New York," and naturally is written from the viewpoint of one who sees that State large in national political affairs. It has, indeed, for many years, taken a prominent part in dictating and shaping the policies and in naming the candidates of both the Democratic and Republican parties. As one reads he wonders if this is so because of the superior qualities of those who have assumed the right to lead, or whether the ability to dominate for so long has been due to the willingness of political bosses to resort to cunning and questionable practices which others might refuse to employ.

+ + + The author does not condone the expedients practiced by Tammany Hall under the rule of Tweed, Croker, the Murphys and others, neither does he commendas worthy of emulation the practices of Thomas C. Platt, on the one side, or David B. Hill on the other. It has been a constant and continuing battle of wits for many years. One is inclined to believe that the warfare was never more spectacular than during the years between 1883 and 1905. In the earlier years of that period there was witnessed the spectacular ascendancy of the Democracy under the leadership of Grover Cleveland, to be followed by the destructive contest engendered by jealousy between the Cleveland and Hill factions within the party. The incidents of the contest which resulted in Cleveland's defeat following his first term and his success at the elections four years later are graphically told. Perhaps these chapters are the most interesting ones in a book which is not uninteresting in Roosevelf began early to be a thorn in the flesh of the state Democracy. His persistence, his invulnerability and his aggressiveness, in the maintenance of a standard of political integrity, made him eligible to become one of the "big four" in party councils. The story of his refusal to accept the dictation of the older heads is too well remembered to need more than passing reference. Even his nomination as the Republican candidate for the vice-presidency in 1900, following his stormy administration as Governor of New York State, was an honor thrust upon him in the hope that he would thus be sidetracked politically. His accession to the presidency, his election in 1904, and the turbulent upheavals in partisan politics thereafter are events of too recent happening to require a present-day review.

* * * Of course such a record as that under consideration could not have been complete without reference to the events over which the dominant New York quartet seemed to have no control. The entry of Bryan, leader of the free-silver forces, at the Chicago convention in 1896, overturned the plans of the leaders of the old-time Democracy. The tragedy had been long impending. Tammany has no more implacable foe than William Jennings Bryan. Though thrice the nominee of his party, he failed to attain the presidency. Yet his temporary defeat in the St. Louis convention in 1904, when Alton B. Parker was nominated against his vehement protest, primed and equipped him for the victorious battle in Baltimore eight years later, when he succeeded in bringing about the nomination of Wilson and the rout of Tammany Hall.

The impression almost unavoidably gained from a reading of the book is that there are really few "political accidents." Those leaders in party councils who rise to power almost invariably do so through their own determined efforts, or through the questionable practices which for a time elevate them to positions of influence. But it is gratifying to discover, if one has been in doubt, that the rewards of the transgressors are few and insubstantial. Those who have risen to eminence are found to be those who have been steadfast, honest, and regardful of the common right, as opposed to the assumed rights of those who seek to lead that their own selfish ends may be subserved.

Commercial Honor Among the Chinese

IT APPEARS that there is a very high sense of honor among Chinese, writes Henry Crosby Emery, LL. D., in Harper's Monthly Magazine. So is there among the merchants of America, England, Germany and other countries. Again, the differences between individuals are infinitely greater than those between nations. To all this must be added that, since China is an older country, her merchants developed a sense of honor long before western countries. At a time when European commerce was half trade and half piracy, China had developed this high commercial morality. It is probably the half-buccaneering traders who first brought news of this strange and honorable custom to lands who as yet knew it not. Today Chinese commercial honor and English or American commercial honor differ little except that China had developed it centuries before it was adopted in foreign lands.
